

Two Police Officers Guilty of Drunkenness, Dismissed From Force

Officers William Rowlands and Michael Bompczik, Accused of Intoxication on Special Election Day, Had Hearings To-Day.

There is no place for men of your type on the police force and this is the only disposition I can make of the case," was the regretful but firm statement of the chief of police, Commissioner of Public Safety Clarence Sietson, in dismissing from the police department Officers William A. Rowlands and Michael C. Bompczik who were charged with intoxication while on duty special election day, November 15.

The following decision is given by Commissioner Sietson in the case of Rowlands, applied specifically in language and detail to the case of the other officers, it is stated:

"The complaint in this proceeding having been duly made and served, upon the accused, with a notice of hearing thereof before the commission on the 21st day of November, 1932, and the proceeding coming on to be heard at the Common Council Chamber in the City Hall, Utica, N. Y., on said day, I find the accused guilty."

The complaint appearing by Arthur M. Gibson, assistant corporation counsel, and the accused appearing by William F. Downing, Esq., the accused being filed his answer to said charges in writing, testimony was offered for and against the accused on the merits and the matter was submitted for disposition.

The accused is charged with having become intoxicated while on duty, in violation of the rules and regulations governing the Bureau of Police.

The accused admits having had four drinks of liquor which he concedes to be high but claims to be unable to say how many he drank and only approximately five in his stomach.

There is no dispute as to the fact that the accused was generally in possession of liquor and that he was unable to say how many he drank and only approximately five in his stomach.

On the day in question the accused was detailed to guard duty at a polling place at an important election. Upon information received from the police work and in the determination of this department to banish from it every man proven to have been in violation of the law, it brings the policeman's good name and calling into disrepute and renders the paraker of liquor until mentally and morally from due performance of duty.

"Drunkenness has no place in police work and it is the determination of this department to banish from it every man proven to have been in violation of the law, it brings the policeman's good name and calling into disrepute and renders the paraker of liquor until mentally and morally from due performance of duty."
