Season Wanted The Pay and Would Not Work-Have Considerable Some Due

Then Others at Work To-Dave There was a heap of trouble at the Butterfield last night because the dinner intended for the guests of the house went precipitated by the bankruptcy proceedsiderable aum of money owing to the cooks and waiters of the house and the

of the creditors. There were in all about twenty-five in the house who felt ag- | lexly. grived that the salaries due them were. iot forthcoming and after juncheon) esterbay they decided that the best thing to do was to strike. A meeting was held and it was decided to bring the management's nose to the grindstone by fefusing to serve the dinner at a o'clock if all the arrears were not souted up. The head, walter, Floyd Peresett, informed the would not serve dinner unless they were paid their wages from the time that the bankruptcy proceedings were instituted. but did not insist upon the payment of the amounts due them before that time. The mandger gave Pererett the money to pay the walters as they had noked, and i then the paying process was partially over word came from the kitchen that the cooks would not serve the dinner that had been prepared until all of the money that was coming to them. was paid. The bakers and other help who had to do with the serving of the nical were of a similar mind, and they congregated in the back part of the house and awaited developments. Mr. Could told them that they were preferred credltors and in the due course of time would seceive the money that was coming to them, but that under the law he was not permitted lo pay them except for nervices rendered after the prospedings were instituted. This he offered to do and told them furthermore that they to seed, at the close of each day if they desired. This did not ratisfy them, however, and the cooks, after dumping the dinner and the fires. locked the doors of the kitchen. Fearing were summoned from the police station. Last evening the audience was of its usual propertions and the variety of things the Bant Milli caused his subjects to do enteetained the big audience thoroughly. Among other things he caused his subjects to see pictures in the fire, and every time that the pictures changed the expressions on the faces of those who saw the pictures changed also, and the comments that they made showed ricerly that the pictures that the hypnottet described were very definitely defined in their minds. " Take some one your size," shouted one of the subjects, when he caw a cruck father beating his child. "Throw stones at him?" shouted another. "He sin't to blame," coased another who did not want the child to get the worst of it. Then two fellows got to fight. ing in the minds of the subjects. "Girs it to Mm." yelled one. "Knock his block off," whooped spother. Everybody in the circle had advice to give to the imaginary combatants, and not a few of them cried when they saw a young man line up to a bar and take his first drink. "Don't you do it," "Take a smoke," "You'll be sorry," were some of/the comments made while this picture was in sight. The hypnotist told them that the roung man had gone home drunk, but that the door was locked and he could not get in. "Go in the cells." "Try that window," was some of the advice given the unfortunate fellow.
